Supremacy

You have decided that a hard court is indispensable! The next point is "what make?" Your decision is a momentous one, for success or failure depends thereon.

EN-TOU-CAS Courts are not an experiment. For years they have held the leading position unchallenged, although imitators are constantly appearing.

The overwhelming majority of hard courts are EN-TOU-CAS—they are acknowledged the best, and have proved supreme in every respect.

THE En-Tout-Cas HARD LAWN TENNIS COURT

Patent No. 18784

FACTS: Over 9,000 EN-TOU-CAS Courts made. Nearly 200 repeat orders during 1923. The most noted Clubs in Great Britain use EN-TOU-CAS Courts, including the ALL ENGLAND CLUB (Wimbledon); RANELAGH; HURLINGHAM; ROEHAMPTON; and QUEEN'S CLUB. The three most important new Clubs formed during the last twelve months—the new HOLLAND PARK CLUB, 15 Courts; the new BARON'S COURT CLUB, 10 Courts; and the new SUTTON (SURREY) HARD COURT CLUB, 9 Courts—have EN-TOU-CAS Courts exclusively.

If you came to see us

IF all the good people who buy wire netting could come to an Association works and see all the trouble that is taken to get wire netting just what it should be and always what it ought to be, they would say: "Well! that netting ought to be good. They don't leave much to chance in these works."

That's just it. You can't leave anything to chance. Everybody has to look alive to see that not a single thing goes by that isn't just right. That's how British manufacturers made their name in the world and how British Wire Netting is the standard of good quality all over the world.

British Wire Netting is made in the factories of the British Wire Netting Manufacturers' Association and is marked with their brand. No unmarked wire netting is made by the Association.

The Car that is different and REASONS WHY—

Hillman

The Guaranteed Car

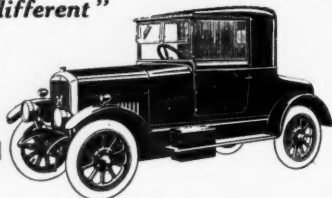

REASONS WHY:—No. 6.
Raising the hood of a HILLMAN is as easy as opening a roll-top desk.
You can do it with one hand from the driver's seat.

EVERY convenience expected with a high-class motor carriage is included in the HILLMAN.
An owner driver and particularly the lady driver could wish for nothing better or more complete. The feature illustrated is one always appreciated and often remarked upon. There is no need to get out of a HILLMAN to raise the hood, just lean back and open it with one hand as you would a coupé top, the action is exactly the same. The handsome black leather hood then joins the wind screen and is held firm with two thumbscrews. No help is required, it is a single handed action from first to last. Nothing could be simpler, nothing more effective.
With the side screens all in position
the HILLMAN is then a closed car equal to any coupé. Hail, rain or shine any time's HILLMAN time.
Whatever the weather the HILLMAN is right.

At the reduced prices of £350 for the All-weather Two/Three Seater and £358 for the All-weather Four-Seater, the 1924 HILLMAN represents remarkable value. Dunlop Tyres are standard.

The famous HILLMAN TWELVE MONTHS' GUARANTEE remains the same. A postcard will bring you a copy of the HILLMAN Catalogue.

Sutton's

ANNUALS

THE past few years have been especially noted for the revival of the cultivation of annuals, and many garden lovers have been surprised to find how numerous were the new varieties, as well as the older and forgotten beauties, that could give fresh charm to the garden. Scotsmen seem to have realised this even more than the Southerner, and it astonishes the visitor from the South to see the extent to which annuals are grown in the north and the extraordinary vigour of plants that produce flowers in abundance till late in Autumn.

The numerous delightful annuals—
such as Candytuft, Coreopsis, Clarkia, Chrysanthemum, E. chscholtzia, Godetia,
Larkspur, Lavatera, Linaria, Nemesis,
Nigella, Poppy, Salpiglossis, Swan
River Daisy, Sweet Sultan, China
Asters, Stocks, Anchusa, Viscaria, and other beautiful flowers (notably Antirrhinum), which, though not strictly annuals, can be grown in the same manner—will produce most effective displays in beds and borders at a much smaller outlay, and in much less time than can be obtained by other means.

COLOUR EMPHASIS IN SPRING RENOVATIONS AND DECORATIONS

GAZES have built up an exceptional reputation for fine decorative work at reasonable cost.

Enquiries are invited and a cordial invitation to "The Gazeway" is extended to all who appreciate colour schemes of perfect harmony. The house of Gazes—known as "The Gazeway," faces the river, on the Portsmouth Road, at Surbiton, where examples can be seen of colour effects, unusual without being bizarre, charming in conception and delightful to live with.

Gazes undertake to supply every need in home furnishing, including lighting and heating. The advantage of one firm carrying the work through from start to finish means cohesion throughout in idea and design besides to-day's great desideratum—economy.

An enquiry, or a visit to "The Gazeway" with its house of "colour" surprises, and beautiful model gardens implies no obligation whatever.

The Benefits of Scientific Illumination for Town and Country Houses

THE charm and comfort of any room may be completely spoiled by incorrect illumination. It may not be that the lighting is inadequate. Possibly it is too bright, causing that unpleasant dazzle which is so trying to the eyesight.

It costs no more to have perfect light such as is possible with Holophane Units; indeed, it may prove to be an economy. With these units, which are made to suit every kind of building, the light is scientifically controlled. Waste is eliminated—the whole room is filled with a cheerful, soft light, adequate for all requirements, yet free from glare and shadow.

Everyone interested in the lighting of Town and Country Houses, Hotels, or any type of building, should write for illustrated Brochure, dealing more fully with the subject.

Holophane for Scientific Illumination is based on thirty years' study of illumination problems in all types of buildings. An Engineering Department is maintained for answering any question. It enables you to secure expert and unbiased advice on any particular lighting problem. This advice is freely given, without any charge or obligation being incurred.

The Holophane Lighting Service is applicable to all forms of artificial illumination and for all types of Units.

Specifications prepared by Holophane Engineers can be obtained free of charge from any Lighting Contractor—or write direct for Brochure No. 31.

Electrical Labour-Savers at Harrods

HARRODS have in stock a most comprehensive selection of electric labour-saving devices that will save you both time and money. Moreover, these appliances, simple as can be to work, will save their initial cost many times over in operation.

THOR '25' WASHER, shown above, works on the same principle as that used by dry cleaners in treating the most delicate fabrics. This machine can do an average 'wash' in one-third the time it takes by hand, at a cost of threepence or less for electricity. Operates from any electric light connection.

The 'HOOVER,' shown at the head of the page, lifts and beats the carpet, shaking loose the embedded dirt, as well as the surface litter, and dustlessly withdraws it all into a dust-tight bag. Costs about one penny an hour to run off the lighting circuit and is made for every standard voltage from 32 to 250, direct or alternating current.

PORCELAIN AND LACQUER

HERE is a special interest attached to the early output of the Worcester porcelain factory, which was first known as "the Worcester Tonquin manufacture," as a challenge to "the New Canton Works" at Bow; and some of the pieces from the collection of old English porcelain formed by Mr. W. Sydney Smith, C.B., to be sold at Messrs. Puttick and Simpson's on March 21st, date from the early years of Dr. Wall.

A pair of Worcester plates with scalloped rim painted with exotic birds, large butterflies and fruit by a Chelsea artist, bear the well known Chelsea red anchor mark, and in connection with this mark it will be remembered that a Worcester advertisement in 1768 contains the following paragraph: "Curious Patterns that are wanted will be made in a short time not to be distinguished from the original, as the Proprietors have engaged the best Painters from Chelsea."

Three examples of early Worcester—a bowl, a coffee-cup and saucer, and a covered sugar-basin—bearing the rare comb mark are painted with the same curious subject, known as "The Elopement," a mounted horseman, bow in hand, with a lady seated pillion-wise behind him. A white fluted teacup without a handle, and its saucer painted with insects, the Chinese kylin and a group of berries in the collection of the late Sir Walter Armstrong, together with other properties, including works by Daniel Gardner, Allan Ramsay, George Morland, Hoare and Sir Thomas Lawrence.

Oriental lacquer towards the end of the seventeenth century began to filter through from the East to Europe, and its strangeness, beauty and rarity made an appeal to the French cabinet-makers, who set these imported panels upon the surface of furniture of their own construction, such as cabinets and commodes, and mounted them sumptuously in ormolu. The next step was to imitate the effect of the Oriental process in the simpler and simpler process of European lacquer or, as it was termed at the time, jappanning, which became a fashionable pastime in England. At Strawberry Hill, Horace Walpole included in his collection a cabinet jappanned by Lady Walpole, his mother; and John Gurney advertises in the London Gazette, March, 1693, "Japan Cabinets, Indian and English." The drawing upon the European lacquer never has the peculiar summary and unerring rapidity of the Oriental work, especially noticeable in rendering the growth of flowers and flowering shrubs and the flight of birds; but the European versions of Oriental design, as may be seen in the fine commode illustrated from Mr. Basil Dighton's catalogue of his recent purchases, are careful renderings from some original Oriental the Chinese taste, from Lady Charlotte Schreiber's famous collection, bears on the saucer the Chelsea raised anchor mark. Two blue and white coffee-pots are interesting as showing the interdependence of the English china factories; both are painted with flowering plants and insects in blue on a modelled herringbone ground; the Bow pot, however, bears the arrow mark, and the smaller Worcester pot the crescent.

Two Longton Hall teapots are of interest to the collector. One, 7ins. high, is painted with groups of flowers in panels formed of stems and scrolls in low relief, the lower part being modelled with vertical leaves in low relief, touched with colour. A second teapot, slightly larger, is similar, except that the panels are painted with two English renderings of Oriental interior scenes, and flowers. Two white cylindrical mugs, by Flight and Barr, are unusual, one being painted in sepia with a portrait of Mrs. Wheatley as Winter, by Pennington after Bartolozzi (from the original painting by Francis Wheatley), and inscribed on the base, "Winter, bless my heart, how cold it is"; there is a narrow gilt border of holly round the rim. A second, but smaller, white mug, by the same maker, is painted in sepia with an oval medallion of Innocence, a small girl holding a lamb, by Pennington after Bartolozzi, framed in a gilt border, with gilt foliage sprays.

On Friday, March 14th, Messrs. Christie are selling a few pictures and drawings from screen or panel in the middle years of the eighteenth century, or versions of the designs of Jean Pillement, the author of many chinoiseries, petits parasols chinois, tentes, fontaines, and so forth, which are a hybrid of East and West. The ground is black, the lacquer flat and finished, a characteristic of French work, the condition remarkable. The commode opens in front in two ormolu-rimmed cupboard doors; the scene depicted is not continuous—on the left hand are a group of women musicians; on the right-hand door, a man and woman in the pillared loggia of a house. The green marble top is original; the leafy ormolu mounts at the angles, finishing in scroll feet, are boldly designed; while on the apron is applied an ornament of acanthus scrolls centring in a mask. In contrast to this commode is the brilliant colouring of the cabinet of Chinese orange lacquer, in which the ornament, figures, double prunus blossom and pomegranate fruit, is carved in coloured soapstone in low relief, surrounded by gold foliage.

A few lots of silver were disposed of last week at Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley's rooms by direction of the trustees of the late Mr. H. R. Solly. A two-handled strainer (1748), 4 oz. 17dwts., realised 38s. per ounce; two sugar dredgers (1731), 10 oz. 11dwts., 53s. per ounce; a Queen Anne two-handled bowl (1705) 3 oz. 1dwts., £3 15s. per ounce; a James I silver-gilt chalice (1617-18), 7 oz. 5dwts., £175. A PRELIMINARY TEST OF THE NEW 14 H.P. BEAN

IT is a safe assertion that no medium-priced, medium-powered chassis has at the time of its debut met with more favourable reception than did the 14 h.p. Bean. It was just before the last Olympia Show that, after a long period of preliminary experimenting and testing on the road, the chassis was formally presented to a party of critics, and, as I said at the time when reviewing the chassis, I have never seen such a kindly welcome extended to any new motoring thing. There was not a single dissentient voice in the assembly and a wonderful future was freely prophesied for the new car, a prophecy with which I was—and still am—in full agreement. It was not that the new chassis embodied any startling departures from orthodox practice. Indeed, with the possible exception of one or two quite unimportant details, there is nothing in the design and construction of this chassis that has not been applied, and in the main successfully employed, in others. Had the chassis bristled with new and unconventional features its reception would, doubtless, have been more restrained, for entirely new things always need to be considered with a special degree of caution. If, then, everything was orthodox and if there were nothing to challenge firmly established practice, wherein lay the charm of this very special, but quite ordinary, newcomer?

Its merits lay in the very skilful incorporation of the most modern principles, dominated by two important considerations that often tend to disappear on ultra modern designs and which are in themselves somewhat at variance—neatness and a high degree of accessibility. The neat engine will always catch the eye, and the obvious accessibility of all parts that are likely to require attention will always appeal to the experienced owner driver who likes to be as independent as possible of the professional repairer. Either asset may be found in many cars, but the combination is so rare as to bring the Bean almost into a class apart. Next to these quite tangible assets, the new Bean exercised a fascination for those who inspected it on this memorable occasion by the compactness and cleanness of its general lay-out. The chassis gives no suggestion of that undesirable sensation, that arises with so many, that this, that or the other component has been stuck on as an afterthought by a designer who had forgotten that it had to be there. There is a place for everything and everything is in its place.

THE MODERN FAMILY CAR.

Beyond these attractions of detail the 14 h.p. Bean has the by no means negligible asset of satisfying fashion in two important aspects—perhaps the two most important. Both in size and in price it meets modern ideas for the family touring car. The complete five-seater touring car, without two very desirable extras, costs £395, the chassis being £325, and the power rating of the engine is 13.9. There is every indication that the place once occupied by the 15.9 h.p. class of car is to be taken by the Fourteen, which comes very nicely between the rather hefty 15.9 or larger car and the possibly undersized light car of which the engine is rated at less than 12 h.p. In such matters as fuel consumption and general running cost the 14 h.p. properly designed car is a happy compromise between the 15.9 and the 11.9, while it can be said quite safely that the performance of the new type of car is an emphatic improvement on the 15.9 that it promises to supplant. Of course, other things being equal, the higher-powered car will put up a better showing on the road than the 13.9, but the point is that other things cannot be equal without a considerable increase in price that limits the appeal of the larger car to a class of purchaser more generously endowed with worldly goods. The new Fourteens, of which there are several, must be compared not with the 15.9, that costs, sometimes, more than 50 per cent. more money, but with those that were at least within 30 per cent. of their prices, and this comparison will generally result in favour of the new type.

A detailed description of the new Bean chassis is hardly called for in view of the fact that it was reviewed so comprehensively in the issue dated October 27th last, and I now propose to give no more than its salient features and to indicate their worth as demonstrated by a preliminary test of the car on the road. Any short test of a new car is necessarily inconclusive, but when the car is of an entirely new model and is, moreover, a brand new vehicle, this usual failing is doubly emphasised. The newness of the one tried, naturally, prevented any truly reliable idea being formed of its capabilities in many important directions, and no new model has yet left a motor car factory without undergoing several important modifications in detail as the result of its first few months on the road. And, let it be hoped, never will! The designer who can fathom every possible cranny where improvement might be incorporated when the car gets into the hands of the public, before it has been in those hands for some time, simply does not exist. Or, if by any chance, he should come into existence he would not remain there long. He has tried it once or twice, but he and his car have duly disappeared without even a wreath to commemorate the spot they once occupied. It will be gathered from this that there are on the new Bean several details that are not perfect, and it is because I am confident that a designer and a factory capable of such a production as is this new car simply could not adopt an ostrich attitude, that I am looking forward with exceptionally pleasurable anticipation to a later test of a car that shall not be brand new in itself and that shall embody at least a few of the present corners that are very square and pointed in a much rounded form. I will go so far as to venture on very delicate ground and say that some of us remember the early 11.9 h.p. Bean. No more promising car has ever been introduced than that, but for a long time the materialisation of its promise was prevented by what can only be called a silly, though serious defect. Once that was rectified the car went along like the proverbial house of fire and it has never stopped since. But it was long after the car had been eternally damned in the eyes of many critics that the makers seemed to wake up quite suddenly to the weakness, and what an uphill struggle they had to gain a unique position that might have been theirs for the asking in the beginning! This excellent 11.9 is in no way supplanted by this even more promising 13.9, and when the new model has received its due chastenings Bean supremacy will undoubtedly extend to two popular classes of motor car.

THE END OF THE BELT.

It has been said that there are no striking departures from orthodoxy in the design of the new chassis and this is well exemplified in the engine, although

"FOURTEEN"

Price complete £425

At £425 the Wolseley Fourteen undoubtedly represents the highest value ever offered in a modern car. It is a full sized touring car, roomy, comfortable, and thoroughly well equipped with every necessary requirement. It gives a really first-class road performance, being particularly good on hills, and at the same time is very economical to run. It is beautifully finished in every detail, and upholstered in real English leather.

The equipment comprises: Electric starter, Electric lighting, including head lamps, side lamps on wings, and tail lamp; Autovac petrol feed, 815×105 Dunlop cord tyres, spare wheel and tyre, all-weather curtains, speedometer, clock, valances, spring gaiters, electric horn, foot rest, etc.

this certainly has one novel point in that even the fan, among the auxiliaries, is chain driven. Every sensible motorist hates the belt, but there is something to be said against the use of a chain for driving the fan, for unless this latter be scrupulously balanced it is apt to transmit its vibration periods through a chain whereas they would be absorbed by a belt. However, the Bean fan must be well balanced. Every chain in the distribution gear has a simple and ready means of adjustment and both magneto and dynamo are equally get-at-able, whether for simple adjustment or complete removal. Indeed, I may as well say at once that I discovered only two details about the chassis that were likely to need attention and could not be given it as quickly as might be conceivably possible—and these two were the very two that need touching most often! One is the fuel tap at the base of the Autovac, and the other is the float needle of the Zenith carburettor. Both are fouled by pipes or rods that demand finger contortions before they can be reached, though it would be wrong to suggest that they are really difficult of access.

As instances of the care that has been provided to ensure easy access to most parts that will require it, may be specified the provision of a pair of tapped and threaded holes in the detachable cylinder head, into which may be screwed T-shaped keys to facilitate lifting the head for decarbonisation, and, incidentally, minimising the risk of a damaged cylinder gasket in the process. Another detail is the location of the fuel filler on the tank at the rear of the chassis at the side, so that luggage on the grid (a standard fitting), does not interfere with replenishment of the tank. At the side of this filler is a gauge giving the amount of fuel in the tank in gallons—not the more usual and generally misleading halves and quarters of the tank's capacity.

DUAL IGNITION.

Reference to the magneto will have indicated that this is the standard form of ignition, but anyone preferring distributor and coil may have them in addition to the magneto at an extra cost of £7 10s., provision being made for their quick

The exceptional ease of access to most of the engine auxiliaries is adequately shown in this view of the off-side of the power unit, which also shows the fabric flexible joint in the steering column (which is adjustable for rake to suit different drivers).

attachment to an existing car in place of the usual oil filler plate, which is shown in the illustration of the rear side of the engine, just underneath the valves from which the cover plate has been removed. All camshafts have cut in them spiral gears for driving the distributor, whether this is fitted to the car in the first instance or not, and removal of the oil filler plate exposes this drive so that the new plate, with the distributor mounted on it, may be attached at once.

As regards internals, the crank-shaft has three bearings and is hollow for lubrication of both main and big end-bearings under pressure, only the pistons and little ends relying on splash. Cooling is by pump circulated water with a radiator of large capacity and, of course, the already mentioned chain-driven fan. It is thoroughly efficient cooling, but a word of "warning" must be given about it. The specification of the car says that a temperature corrector is fitted on the instrument board and one immediately conjures up visions of radiator shutters or by-pass valves for the cooling water. Apparently, however, this temperature corrector is nothing more than a title of dignity for the very useful air strangler or extra air admission valve for the carburettor. Both excellent things to have, but neither quite a temperature corrector in the ordinary sense.

The pistons of the engine are aluminium, and this is a feature that limits the liberties that may be taken with a brand new car. I remember that some two years ago I tried out a very fine six-cylinder car with this kind of pistons and brand new. Its maximum speed of barely a mile a minute was, I considered, for a car of the power (24 h.p.) and price (well over the £1,200 mark), distinctly disappointing, and, naturally, I said so in these pages, to the considerable disappointment of the makers. But a month later, when the car had some 1,200 miles to its credit, it was doing its 72 m.p.h. with ease.

The clutch, which consists of five steel plates, three of which are lined with Ferodo, is one of the features of the chassis that are incapable of improvement. It is the essence of sweetness in engagement, and top-gear get-aways from rest are the easiest thing in the world for anyone who is fool enough to try them. Unit construction is adopted for engine, clutch pit and gear-box, the four forward ratios of this latter being 4.5, 7.25, 10.4 and 16.85 to 1 with reverse of 23 to 1. The change is fair, that upward being pleasantly quick, while little discrimination is needed for timing downwards when simple double declutching is employed. But there is one thing about the gear change that, in my opinion at least, verges on the limit of absurdity. The reverse slot on a four-speed gate may be given one of two positions, either alongside first or second slots, or alongside third or top; of the two either of the latter is the worst. On the Bean the reverse slot is next to the third speed. The disadvantage is not really serious, being simply that one must come right through the gate from reverse to first when manoeuvring the car in a confined space, but as it confers no advantage, why is it used? Similar to this, by the way, is the positioning of the engine starter switch on the footboard, where it is operated by foot. There is only one reasonable alternative position—on the instrument board, and it is indubitably the better and more convenient. Although remarkably easy starting is a characteristic of the engine, the electric starter is not up to its work of spinning the engine when the car is new and the weather of a morning is chilly, but even under these conditions a couple of sharp though easy pull-ups by hand of the starting handle set the works going quite surely.

Rearward transmission is through an open propeller shaft, so that torque reaction is taken by the rear springs, and the usual spiral-bevel drive, the whole transmission system being rather more silent than one has a right to demand of cars of this class and price. Suspension by semi-elliptic springs all round, those in the rear being underslung, is just as good as it can be. Indeed, for a car of the size and type it is superb, and I say this, even admitting that some form of shock absorber or snubber might be an improvement. Irish, perhaps, but true, as it could barely be otherwise, for ideal suspension by springs alone on a car of this kind is all but impossible of attainment.

The specification says that the springs are encased in spring gaiters, but these were absent from this demonstration car. The wheels are steel detachable for tyres of the adequate size of 3 ins. by 4 ins.

Although the Bean is available at £25 extra with four wheel brakes, the car tested was not so equipped. For one reason I am glad, for the omission enables me to say that the brake action of the internal expanding brakes on the rear wheels admits of only one description—perfect. The same cannot be said of the position of the hand brake lever, which is not quite so handy as it might be, but its straight pull up motion is quite useful.

Valve side of the engine with one of the cover plates removed, exposing the tappets and the oil-filler plate, which is removed if battery ignition be fitted, just underneath. The forward sweep of the exhaust manifold and the starting motor are also shown.

BODYWORK.

On the bodywork of this car I will be content with saying that there is plenty of room for five passengers and that the front seats are adjustable. To enter into details on the seating positions would, I fear, be indiscreet, though the point is one into which personal taste enters very largely and prospective purchasers may easily satisfy themselves on it by sitting in a car for a few minutes in the showroom. In the matter of equipment the body, like the rest of the car, is rather better than just excellent. All useful gadgets and adequate accommodation for tools and odds and ends are present, though there is an extraordinary failing in the windscreen, which has the larger of its two panels (both adjustable) at the top so that if it has to be opened in wet weather (a wiper is, however, fitted as standard) the maximum possible opening is offered through which the rain may beat. I am told that the reason has something to do with the suitability of the car for overseas use, but unfortunately I could not slip over to the Antipodes to prove its worth for myself.

The hood is a Calso, which means that it is the best kind of hood available for open touring cars, and it is hoped to say more about it in an early issue. For the present let it be enough that it can be raised by a child using one hand only. Fact! I believe that the all-weather side curtains emanate from the same makers as the hood, but wherever they come from they do not reflect equal credit. They remind one of some human beings—too clever to work. They have most ingenious fastenings to the hood and still more remarkable signalling flaps, which are utterly futile as wind preventers, and with the side curtains and hood erected this Bean is easily the draughtiest vehicle of any sort in which I have had the misfortune to travel.

ON THE ROAD

If I wanted to be unkind, I could say quite truthfully and very literally that the dominant note of this car's road performance is that of its carburettor. For some

SUPREME SUNBEAM

THE 24/70 h.p. does everything that the biggest and most costly of cars can do. Proof of this is furnished by Sunbeam Owners themselves.

The 4523 c.c. six-cylinder overhead valve engine gives a power output abundant for every need. Running is smooth and silent, from 4 m.p.h. to a maximum limited only by the dictates of the road. Yet with such a super-efficient engine the annual tax is only £24.

This car has the wonderful Sunbeam Four Wheel Brakes—operated by Servo motor. No physical effort, no strain. Just a touch of the pedal and the car is "slowed" safely and surely. The Sunbeam braking system is no experiment, for the Sunbeam Company have more practical experience with four wheel brakes than any other manufacturers.

The 24/70 h.p. chassis dimensions take any type of coachwork—open or closed. As a five or seven seater touring car, fast, luxuriously comfortable, reasonable in price and upkeep, it is unsurpassed. And Sunbeam quality covers every detail.

reason this Zenith is, at speeds above 28 m.p.h., the noisiest I have ever heard on an engine with more than two cylinders. But in due course a silencer will be fitted—at least I hope so—and having disposed of this point we can turn to others. The engine power output of over 30 b.h.p. is, then, adequate for all circumstances, though it would be unfair to speak of the maximum speed of this brand new car as any indication of what a well "run in" model could do. Suffice it therefore to say it was satisfactory under the circumstances and highly promising of better things to come. The flexibility of the engine can only be described accurately as remarkable, for it is as good as that of most four-cylinder units rated at over 20 h.p. Hill climbing is thoroughly satisfactory—indeed, rather more so, except that it seemed to me that a somewhat higher third speed ratio would be an improvement—and I cannot imagine a hill this car could not climb so long as its wheels could secure a grip. There is, however, room for improvement in the overall mechanical silence of the engine.

The "roadability" of the car has already been partly covered in the comments on the brakes and suspension. The other primary component of this vital matter is the steering, and that of the Bean Fourteen is just as good as it could be on a car of this type. It is a sort of happy compromise between that of the big Rolls-Royce and that of the late lamented Belsize-Bradshaw, and higher praise than this cannot be given to any steering on any car. There is a fabric joint in the steering column which effectively insulates the driver's arms from all road shocks, so that a frequent source of fatigue is definitely removed once and for all. On the whole, therefore, this car earns a very high figure of merit on the score of "roadability," which may be loosely interpreted as ease of control, steadiness and comfort. When you have adequate engine power combined with unique flexibility and a four-speed gear-box, generous springing, perfect brakes and excellent steering, you have not much left out of the desiderata of road performance in the widest sense of the term.

It would be wrong to describe this new production as a perfect car, but it is not wrong to describe it as the most promising car that has yet appeared in its class and of its price. A few modifications here and a few drastic changes there—drastic that is from the point of view of the owner, but invariably small from the point of view of the makers—and this car will not be a "has been" until all of us are very much older. And I here say "has been" with dual reference to the life of the individual car and to that of the design. The durability of the car is beyond question, and the march of progress will have made many steps before the design even savours of obsolescence.

W. HAROLD JOHNSON.

An Aero Engine in the Making.

MESSRS. D. Napier and Sons, Limited, recently exhibited a most interesting film picturing some of the details in the production and application of their successful aero engines. While not intended as a full record of the actual manufacture of the engine, the film is of a character that will bring home to the lay mind, even more graphically than would a complete record, the essentials and intricacies of aero engine production. As evidence of the care taken in the production of each component and as some explanation of the costliness of aero power units may be mentioned the fact that twenty operations are involved in the production of the cylinders alone, and that whereas the original forging weighs over 100lb., the weight of the finished cylinder is but 8lb. 14 oz.

The film concludes with a picture of some of the achievements of this engine, such as the winning of the Aerial Derby in 1923 and of the Schneider Cup in 1922.

The Import Duty and Car Prices.

IT is widely anticipated that the coming Budget will witness the disappearance of the duty of 33½ per cent. on imported cars, a restriction imposed during the war for the sole purpose of raising revenue, but since maintained with excellent effects on the car industry of this country. It would, indeed, be difficult to conceive a more striking example of the value of a protective tariff to a home industry than this, for the sister industry to that of the manufacture of private cars—the commercial vehicle industry—has never received any such protection and is only a short way removed from total extinction, while the private car industry has never been more flourishing than it is at present.

And yet, paradoxically enough, the import duty on private cars has in the majority of cases only a very small influence on their retail selling prices. As a result of the duty many foreign manufacturers have established factories either in Great Britain or in the British Empire, with the result that their products, if imported at all, come in duty free. On the ethics of this fact from the point of view of both manufacturer and car purchaser it is not now necessary to enter, but it is obvious that under such conditions the existence or otherwise of an import duty on cars of the same name, but made in a foreign country, i.e., not part of the British Empire, has no influence on the selling price in this country of those cars made, say, in Canada. And these are the only cars of certain makes

The Car behind the Diamond

There are car manufacturers who desire reputation, others there are who have lost it. Some apparently neither have nor desire it. But we are concerned with none of these. For "the Car behind the Diamond" has meant through every year of twenty-six all that was best in modern motoring. In the eleven-40 Engine there is a power reserve which is a positive delight, a silkiness in running which makes the music of motoring, a responsiveness which charms. That we must never jeopardise, neither must we risk the beautiful balance and springing which is characteristic of every Riley model. Whichever of these models you may choose you will be sure of complete satisfaction—with good and willing service always; and at prices which have a sufficiently wide range to suit all purses: £395 to £635. A catalogue describing "the Car behind the Diamond" will be forwarded on request.

that are imported commercially into Great Britain. In the cases of at least two well known American cars—the Overland and the Ford—a very small proportion of parts is imported at all and the extent to which they are manufactured in the protection to the home motor industry, we cannot foresee any drastic change in the motor market as the result of the abolition of such import tax as exists. It is doubtful if the Continental cars are imported in sufficient quantities to make any great manufacturer fears no competition from any country in motor cars selling at about the same price as his own. It is the superficial value-for-money appeal of the very low-priced foreign car, which is often worth no more than is asked for it, that upsets the market. The discriminating buyer is seldom influenced by these very cheap cars, but one fears that true discrimination is still the exception rather than the rule with a large section of the car purchasing public.

Taxis in the Parks.

NOW that taxis are allowed into the Royal Parks, is it reasonable to hope that there will be any improvement in their road manners? For a very long time the taxi-man has been a law unto himself, and no other driver has dared to take the liberties with the rules and duties of the road that these bold spirits habitually display. Among experienced observers the London taxi-man is regarded as one of the worst professional drivers to be found at the wheel of a car anywhere, and his reputation for skill generally rests on a no more solid foundation than the admiration expressed by provincial or foreign visitors, who are naturally impressed by the maze of traffic and by the way their taxi-driver gets them through it. Other drivers in that traffic maze know that the taxi-man's immunity from serious trouble is usually due only to the wide berth they have to give him on account of his erratic piloting and supreme indifference to the welfare of others. In the parks the police have long been active in their control of private cars and it will be interesting to observe if their apparent leniency and favour to the taxi-man is extended from the streets where it is now so often noticeable. The sudden and unannounced turn may be even more dangerous in a park highway than in a crowded street.

For some years the Ford has been paying as little as £7 in import tax, and the probability is that at the present time the amount is much smaller.

Thus, although we are in principle opposed to the abolition of any measure of

THERE is no question of the superior value of the 23-60 h.p. Vauxhall. Ignorant of its exact cost, any good judge would price a "Kington" touring car at £1,000 on appearance alone.

Once its performance is experienced the wonder grows that a car so distinguished in its refined efficiency, power development, and exhilarating liveliness, should cost so little as £895.

Nowhere can the big-car user buy a better car for his purpose, nor one which so successfully demonstrates how British manufacturers can build the best economically.

Fine Craftsmanship

A graceful appearance, luxurious comfort and greatest silence are found together only in Motor Bodies built by experienced craftsmen. Barker's have specialised in fine Coachwork for over 200 years, during which period they have built for Royalty and Nobility.

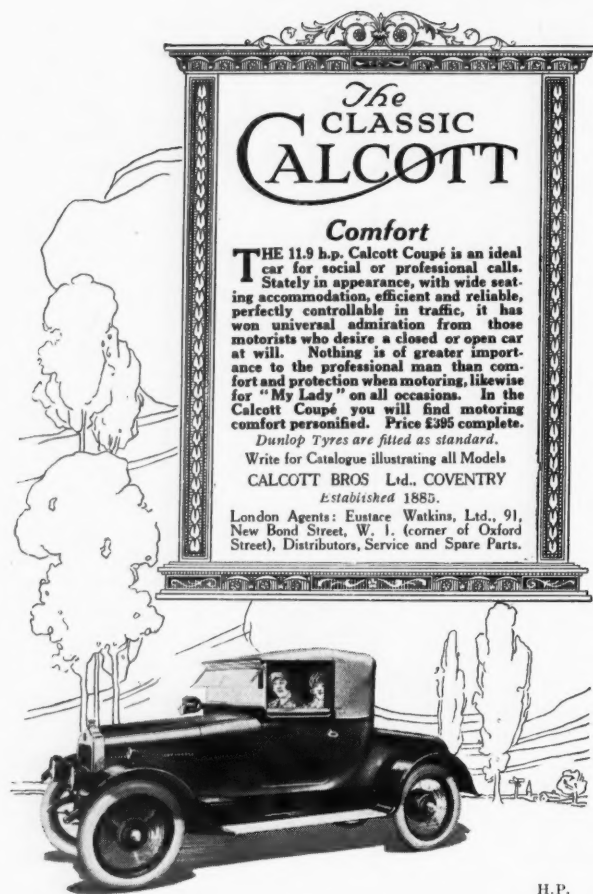

Expert craftsmen only, some of whom have worked at Barker's over 45 years, are employed; none but the finest woods, seasoned for many years, are used; each Barker Body is built specially to meet the exact requirements of the individual customer; here are three reasons why Barker Bodies are as near perfection as human skill can secure.

BOOTS AND SHOES AND THEIR CARE

A STORY is told of a party of friends who found themselves in Moscow, bootless and unprepared for bad winter weather. After a long search they bought some heavy storm shoes; these were not in good condition, for the leather was old and dry and obviously not water or snow proof, but were the best that could be got. One of the party, like the youngest son in the fairy tale, was foreseeing, and carefully and repeatedly bathed the entire outsides of his boots with oil. After a few months his boots were as good as ever, whereas those of his colleagues were worn through and only fit for the dust-heap. There is an obvious moral to the story.

The well dressed Englishman has the reputation for wearing the finest footwear in the world; but, on the other hand, the man in the street pays very little attention to the make of his boots and shoes, and still less to the care of them. He does not consider whether he should wear a light or heavy leather, though, if he wishes to be economical, he must choose the correct kind, for it is only the shoe that is right in material and fit that will last. Moreover, the secret is to have pairs suitable for all occasions: it is not extravagant to have several, for in the end the stock will last far longer than if only two or three were bought and were brought into use on unsuitable occasions. The list must include one heavy pair for hard country wear, and these should every now and then get a good coating of dubbin or ordinary mutton fat, on the sole and inside, for this keeps out the wet.

To-day, the outstanding feature in the footwear world is the popularity of the brown brogued shoe. Some men prefer the full-brogued Oxford, and others the half-brogued, but either is possible for wear with any kind of clothes except the black jacket and waistcoat and the morning coat. The best leather is French wax calf, brown calf or box calf, but the question of colour is of the utmost importance. The right shade of mahogany brown is only attained after continual boning and polishing; moreover, the polish must be the right one. Here I would add a tip: shoes are bound to collect dirt and grease if worn out of doors, and, such being the case, it is no use applying layers of cream or paste. The surface must be thoroughly cleansed every now and again by warm water and soap or a very weak solution of turpentine. This prepares it to receive the polish, which comes up all the better for the clean foundation. Needless to say, boots and shoes should always be cleaned on trees. As soon as they are taken off the feet they should be treed up, otherwise they lose their shape and get shabby at once.

Nothing is nicer than a black calf walking shoe for wear with business or navy suits—by "business" I mean black jacket and waistcoat and striped trousers—but it should be highly boned and polished so that it looks almost like patent leather. The introduction of the suede shoe for wear with the lounge suit was a movement of the younger set at Oxford and Cambridge. It is strange that as soon as a smart man goes down from the 'Varsity he seems to drop his affection for this type of footwear. Perhaps it is just as well, for it gives a distinct air of effeminacy, besides being a very extravagant taste.

Patent-leather shoes are not suitable for daily wear, being only correct with the morning coat and tall hat and evening clothes. In the latter case they are essential, for the old-fashioned pump or court shoe is now entirely out of date, having been replaced by the patent leather with a blocked toe-cap.

Perhaps patent leather requires more care than any other kind, for it is inclined to draw the feet, and unless a great deal of attention is bestowed upon it it cracks readily. Only oil polish should be used, for one that contains spirit kills the leather. During the winter months, when men put away their out of door patent leather shoes, they should apply a thin coat of vaseline, for this preserves and "feeds" the leather.

Boots are not nearly so popular now as shoes, and the old-fashioned buttoned boot with patent-leather gosh and black kid uppers has lost all favour, having given way to the kind with uppers of cloth in shades of grey, buff, tan and white. These are very smart and are correct for wear at weddings and on full dress occasions. For every-day wear, a laced boot with a calf or cloth upper and a black calf galosh is admirable and can be worn with brown, navy or grey suits, and also with business clothes. To clean cloth uppers the best thing I know is a very weak solution of benzine or even warm water and soap applied on a toothbrush. This removes all stains, and then a nice finish can be given by rubbing on a little cleaning ball, provided it is of the right shade. Benzine is excellent for all cleaning purposes and is, perhaps, better than petrol. It should also be used to remove stains from buckskin or suede shoes.

From experience I can say there is nothing to equal leather bootlaces, be they black or brown. They can be cut short with a knife, and have the advantage of being stiff enough to go through the eyelets without difficulty. It is of the utmost importance that the lace should be neat. One of the chief causes of cracked and squeaking shoes is that they have been put near the fire. This should never be done: when they are wet they should be dried in a current of air and treed up.

THE SUBTLE SIMPLICITY OF DRESS

FASHIONS FOR THE COMING SEASON MATERIALIZE.

THE first of the dress shows—and there have been several during the past fortnight—have cleared the atmosphere considerably. Speculation as to what will be worn is more or less over. We now know for certain that the whole essence and onus of the best of the season's fashions rest on a simplicity that is replete with subtlety; that skirts are shorter and quite as slim, waists as long if not longer; that for day wear favours will be divided between coats and skirts, the three-piece and straight little frocks, the latter fashioned of many checks and figured materials.

For the evening there is a feeling for more shiny lustrous satins, like fulgarante, and a great deal of lace is being used—mostly silk and boldly patterned, many gowns carry large posies of flowers pinned on one shoulder or a trail creeping from beneath the arm—and there are scarves on everything.

A dress display of surpassing interest was that held by the Maison Arthur of Dover Street, which was made quite a social affair at the Grafton Gallery. A large and representative crowd attended, and, incidentally, enjoyed an excellent band, tea and a dance in the intervals of watching the parade of mannequins.

It is difficult to recall many of the models in detail, though tailor-mades were unquestionably an outstanding feature, the majority following rather fanciful lines, with short coats clipped in at the hem or else low belted, effected in quiet, non-committal colours relieved by vivid touches of colour. Thus, in the case of an oatmeal toned cloth, there occurred narrow bindings and buttons of lacquer red, a cinnamon rep displaying a novel rouleau at the hem of the coat and round the waist of the frock—for it was a three-piece—worn beneath. An arrestingly smart and eminently useful suit of black rep had the coat trimmed in front with flat volants lined with cardinal red and completed by an important collar that could be worn open or closed, a demure little frock immensely chic being fashioned of some soft beige material, finely checked over in black and dull red, arranged with an apron front and a long straight bodice that closed severely down the centre front with small red buttons. This also had a red collar to be worn close round the throat or thrown back.

Many a young girl looking on must have craved to possess a thé dansant gown of black chiffon taffetas, the gauged skirt of which was trimmed at the hem with a flounce of overlapping petals, repeated as a berthé to the round décolletage and on the short pouf sleeves.

A lace gown, supremely original, was carried out in brown and grey, neither very pronounced in tone, but, mingled deftly as they were, producing a singularly charming cloudy nuance.

The number of all black, and black and white models caused considerable comment, these ranging from straight fine or crystal pleated dresses of Georgette to elaborate evening toilettes.

Our artist contrived to make a lighting sketch of the example pictured, an affair of classical draperies on Greek lines, effected in soft black satin over an under-dress of dead white Georgette, floating handkerchief draperies of the latter appearing either side with a trail of small white flowers.

A propos of scarves and neck finishes generally, the importance now attached to these accessories was forcibly borne home on a recent visit paid to Debenham and Freebody's, Wigmore Street, for the display here is a veritable embarras de richesse, ranging from dainty little inexpensive Peter Pan collars and cuffs in the new ochre shade of muslin, as well as white, to confections of hand-embroidered lawn and beautiful reproduction lace; together with waistcoats of brocaded marocain and piqué, delightful for wearing under the short coats; squares of ninon and crêpe de Chine, printed in gay colours; scarves, long and short, for wearing round the shoulders or throat; in fact, all the latest and most covetable novelties. There is choice for every purse as well as for every taste, 27in. squares of crêpe de Chine in ravishing colours and patterns starting as low as 12s. 11d., and scarves 1½yds. long at 31s. 6d., the more recherché of these scarves being hand blocked in exquisite colours and designs on rich crêpe de Chine and quite worthy of being handed down as heirlooms.

TOPICS OF THE MOMENT

THE SCHIFF HOME OF RECOVERY.

THE splendid achievements of surgery are recognised by everyone; but, perhaps, only the surgeon himself and the patient know how much complete recovery after an operation owes to good nursing, suitable food, pure air and the best surroundings. It was the realisation of all this which led to the establishment of that fine benevolence, The Schiff Home of Recovery, Knowle Hill Park, Cobham, Surrey, where all these good things are given free to surgical semi-convalescents from certain of the London general hospitals. Unfortunately, the rise in prices and disappointment as to certain hoped-for assistance has made it impossible to keep the new wing of thirty-five beds at the disposal of non-paying patients, and the committee is anxious for it to be known that it will for the present be reserved for men and women paying patients, the inclusive charge to whom will be 3 guineas a week. So very many people of the class which does not need to accept charity, people who go, when ill, as paying patients to nursing homes or hospitals, still find it hard in these days to make ends meet at times of illness, and either return to their own homes too soon or endure a protracted convalescence in unsuitable surroundings, that this new departure may yet prove one of the best things the Schiff Home has yet accomplished. The Home is splendidly equipped on the latest lines with a perfect modern operating theatre, lovely gardens and park, and a farm where the cows providing milk for the establishment are kept. All particulars will be given by, and all subscriptions should be sent to, the Secretary-superintendent.

IDEAL FURNITURE AT OLYMPIA.

A very attractive exhibit at the Ideal Home Exhibition is that of Messrs. Heal and Son of 195-198, Tottenham Court Road, London, W.1. Messrs. Heal's Stand is itself a model of artistic display. The entrance is in the form of an oval pavilion devoted to "Sun-Fast" fabrics and colourful cushions and lampshades. Here are shown articles providing a veritable feast of colour which yet have the practical recommendation of being fadeless by sun and daylight. Four complete rooms are shown on the stand: a living room in mahogany with a dining recess; double bedroom in fine mahogany inlaid with black lines; a student's room suitably contrived as a bed-sitting-room in stained oak; and a guests' room in "weathered oak." Each of these apartments is charmingly furnished with artistic, durable and economically priced articles. Dignity and restraint are the predominant characteristics of Messrs. Heal's furniture, and practical utility has been combined with artistic effect in their moderately priced goods to a remarkable degree. Messrs. Heal are exhibiting several specialised articles, prominent among which is their "Eitherside" spring mattress. This has the outstanding feature of being reversible, and by this means a soft or firm surface is presented at will. A very pleasing design of twin beds is shown, and the "Orderly" wardrobe fitted for lady's or gentleman's use has won much approval. A very extensive and pleasing array of china and glass ware in classical and new styles is also exhibited.

THE COOK'S PROBLEMS.

The cook's problems as to the best way of obtaining the right heat at the right time with the least possible expense seem to have been solved once for all by the London Warming Company of 20, Newman Street, Oxford Street, W. At their stall at the Ideal Home Exhibition four capital creations are being shown. They are the famous "Kooks-joie" range; the "Wifesjoie," that wonderful little one-ring gas cooker which will cook a meal for eight people and heat fifteen gallons of water to a temperature of 150° Fahr. in two hours; the "Glow-worm" independent boiler, which is shown in action with the new system of indirect heating with cylinder for bath water and a number of radiators, demonstrating how it saves fuel and that a simple meal may be cooked at the same time; and the "Florence" open fire grate, which burns anthracite and will warm a whole house.

A WHITE SALE AT "WARINGS."

A white sale has been in progress at Messrs. Waring and Gill's (164-180, Oxford Street, W.1) all this week. The reductions in the prices of linens, bedspreads, down quilts, and lace, net and mullin curtains are such as to prove most satisfactory to the châteline. Linen tea-cloths trimmed with hand-made Cluny lace and reduced from 35s. 6d. to 19s. 9d. may be taken as an example of the reductions.

AN ANNUAL REPORT.

The Annual Report of the Standard Life Assurance Company (Head Office, 3, George Street, Edinburgh) is now before us. It must make excellent reading for all policy-holders, and should certainly be obtained by anyone thinking of life assurance in any form. Two new and attractive schemes of life assurance, the "Family Provision" Policy and the "Business Man's" Policy, have been issued during the last year. The Company's epitomised record is: Revenue, £1,756,000; accumulated funds, £14,119,000; and claims paid, £41,220,000.
